CREDITS VS REGULATORY EXAMS

There is still much confusion between FAIS Credits and regulatory examinations.

Credits - The Act requires all financial advisors and intermediaries (providers) to meet specific competence requirements.

Initially these were based on experience and qualifications, however to assist the industry the FSB "reduced" the full qualification requirement to skills programmes relating to credit requirements, to assist those who did not have formal qualifications. Hence the 30 and 60 credit requirements.

Note: The 30 and 60 credit requirement was put in place to accommodate those with industry experience and no qualification. ALL new entrants into the industry are required to obtain a FULL qualification.

What are credits? Credits determine the notional hours of learning. One credit is determined as 10 notional hours; each credit is therefore a collective volume of learning required for a qualification.

Regulatory Examination – These have been put in place to set a minimum standard in terms of:

- Compliance with the legislation and Fit and Proper requirements (First Level Regulatory Examinations).
- Specific Product Understanding (Second Level Regulatory Examinations)

Investor Campus can assist you with determining your credit status with INSETA.
